CIRCULAR

To,

All Head of the Departments

Subject: Conduction of workshop on Good Clinical Practice.

Respected HOD's,

DYPDS is conducting a workshop on 18/08/2023 and 19/08/2023. The topic for the lecture is "Good Clinical Practice". The speaker for the program is Dr. Karibassapa G N.

All the faculty are invited to assemble in the Lecture Hall No. 1 at 9:30 a.m. to attend the programme.

We request all the HOD's to kindly relieve the faculty members to attend the same.

Dr. Anand Shigli
DEAN

All DYPDS Research Scholars, Post Graduate Guide and Faculties who are involved in the design, conduct, oversight, or management of clinical trials can learn about the requirement to be trained in Good Clinical Practice (GCP).

Objectives:

- Upon completion of this course, you will have an understanding of:
- What Good Clinical Practice (GCP) is
- The basic principles of GCP
- What being 'GCP' qualified means and why conducting a study according to GCP is important
- The responsibilities of the investigator
- How GCP should be adopted in the conduct of clinical research

Summary:

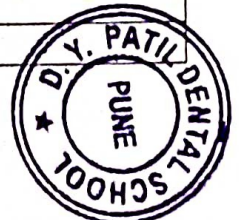

Good clinical practice provides a framework of principles which aim to ensure the safety of research participants and the integrity and validity of data. This short course aims to provide the researcher with the basic principles of GCP and how these principles can be applied practically in the research setting. The course is aimed at all those involved in clinical research.

BIOETHICS

Ethical choices, both minor and major, confront us every day in the provision of health care for persons with diverse values living in a pluralistic and multicultural society. In the face of such diversity, where can we find moral action guides when there is confusion or conflict about what ought to be done? Such guidelines would need to be broadly acceptable among the religious and the nonreligious and for persons across many different cultures. Due to the many variables that exist in the context of clinical cases as well as the fact that in health care several ethical principles seem to be applicable in many situations these principles are not considered absolutes but serve as powerful action guides in clinical medicine. Some of the principles of medical ethics have been in use for centuries. For example, in the 4th century BCE, Hippocrates, a physician-philosopher, directed physicians "to help and do no harm" (Epidemics, 1780). Similarly, considerations of respect for persons and for justice have been present in the development of societies from the earliest times. However, specifically in regard to ethical decisions in medicine, in 1979 Tom Beauchamp and James Childress published the first edition of Principles of Biomedical Ethics, now in its seventh edition (2013), popularising the use of principles in efforts to resolve ethical issues in clinical medicine. In that same year, three principles of respect for persons, beneficence, and justice were identified as guidelines for responsible research using human subjects in the Belmont Report (1979). Thus, in both clinical medicine and in scientific research it is generally held that these principles can be applied, even in unique circumstances, to provide guidance in discovering our moral duties within that situation.

Subject: Conduction of workshop on NAAC ORIENTATION IN HEI

Respected HOD's,

DYPDS is conducting a workshop on 6/1/22 and 7/1/22. The topic for the lecture is "NAAC ORIENTATION IN HEI". The guest speaker for the program is Dr. Mahesh Ahire.

All the faculty are invited to assemble in the Library at 9:30 a.m. to attend the programme.

We request all the HOD's to kindly relieve the faculty members to attend the same.

The National Assessment and Accreditation Council (NAAC) plays a crucial role in ensuring quality standards in Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) in India. Orientation toward NAAC involves understanding its objectives, processes, and criteria for assessment and accreditation. Overall, orientation toward NAAC in HEIs is aimed at helping institutions understand the accreditation process, meet quality standards, and continuously improve their performance in various aspects of higher education.

| PROGRAM OUTCOMES | Orientation toward NAAC in HEI |
| PROGRAM CONTENT | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Understanding NAAC: HEIs need to comprehend the role and importance of NAAC in evaluating and accrediting institutions based on various parameters related to infrastructure, teaching-learning processes, research, governance, and more. 2. Familiarizing with Assessment and Accreditation Process: Institutions must understand the assessment and accreditation process of NAAC, including the criteria, weightage, and documentation required for assessment. 3. Preparing for Self-Study: HEIs typically undergo a self-study process as part of NAAC accreditation, where they critically assess themselves based on the NAAC criteria. Orientation involves guiding institutions on how to conduct this self-assessment effectively. 4. Documentation and Data Collection: NAAC accreditation requires extensive documentation and data collection to support claims made by the institution regarding its infrastructure, academic programs, faculty quality, student support systems, etc. Orientation includes guidance on the type of documentation required and how to organize it. 5. Quality Improvement Initiatives: Orientation toward NAAC also involves promoting a culture of quality improvement within HEIs. Institutions are encouraged to identify areas of improvement based on NAAC criteria and take proactive steps to enhance quality. 6. Preparing for Peer Review: NAAC accreditation involves peer review, where external experts visit the institution to validate the self-assessment findings. Orientation includes preparing |

Environment protection is part of our cultural values and traditions. In Atharvaveda, it has been said that "Man's paradise is on earth; this living world is the beloved place of all; It has the blessings of nature's bounties; live in a lovely spirit". Earth is our paradise and it is our duty to protect our paradise. The constitution of India embodies the framework of protection and preservation of nature without which life cannot be enjoyed. The knowledge of constitutional provisions regarding environment protection is need of the day to bring greater public participation, environmental awareness, and environmental education and sensitize the people to preserve ecology and environment.
